Australian Stock Exchange group to be branded Australian Securities Exchange

From tomorrow, Tuesday 5 December 2006, Australian Stock Exchange Limited will officially change its name to ASX Limited. The new ASX group will operate under the brand “Australian Securities Exchange”.

The change of company name was approved by ASX shareholders at the AGM on 9 October 2006. The new group was created by the merger of the Australian Stock Exchange Limited and SFE Corporation Limited in July 2006.

ASX Limited, one of the world’s top-10 listed exchange groups by capitalisation, will be the holding company for the group that includes licensed businesses spanning the equity, interest rate, commodity and energy markets, offering a full range of listing, trading, clearing, depository, settlement and market data services to domestic and international customers.
