Strategic growth initiatives progressing across all businesses

- Significant growth in offshore customers using new futures trading system
- Expanding customer ecosystem within the Australian Liquidity Centre
- Developing new data and analytics products and services to give customers easier access to more data
- Invested in joint venture to create Sympli to enter the electronic property settlement market

Mr Dominic Stevens, ASX Managing Director and CEO, said: "This is a very pleasing financial result reflecting ASX's disciplined balance between investing in the operation and integrity of our core businesses - our Stronger Foundations initiative - and pursuing growth initiatives.

"Underlying profit rose 7.2% on last year to $465.3 million, an increase of $31.2 million. Each of ASX's four main businesses grew, with the overall performance driven by higher capital raisings and increased futures trading, particularly from offshore customers. Cash market trading was down slightly amid low levels of market volatility. But revenue from technical and information services grew due to increasing connections and data feeds.

"This result highlights the versatility of ASX's diversified business model to deliver attractive earnings growth across different business cycles. We have determined a final dividend of 109.1 cents per share, a rise of 9.3%.

"ASX's expenses rose 8.0%, in line with guidance, with increases in the ASIC levy and electricity charges causing a substantial part of the uplift. Capital expenditure was $54.1 million, reflecting continued investment in strengthening ASX's technology capabilities. These projects include the replacement of CHES, and the upgrading of our secondary data centre and ASX Net communications network, which connects our data centres to customers in Australia and around the world.

"In FY18, we also took steps to strengthen ASX's operational and technological foundations, which help ensure our continued resilience and creates a solid platform for future growth. This included outlining the planned new features and timetable for replacing CHES with distributed ledger technology as the post-trade infrastructure for Australia's equity market; the evolution of the rules and guidance for listed companies to ensure ASX market standards are kept high; and the continued development of our multi-year program to upgrade our technology and operational risk management functions with investments in staff, physical hardware, systems and improved governance."

Mr Stevens continued: “Like all businesses exposed to increasingly complex technology and risk environments, ASX continues to lift its standards to keep meeting the rising expectations of our stakeholders. We are working constructively with our customers, regulators and the wider community to meet those expectations.

“Many of ASX’s key initiatives made good progress during the period. These include the expansion of our listing franchise both internationally and across sectors; significant uptake of the ASX Collateral service, which now sees $20 billion-plus in value transacted on the platform each day; higher OTC clearing volumes, the notional value of which rose 22.2% in FY18 to $6.3 trillion; and growth in the ecosystem within the Australian Liquidity Centre, which now houses 123 customers.

“We also pursued new business opportunities. For example, our data strategy is developing, where we are looking to help customers optimise the value inherent in the large volume of data we generate across our businesses; and we invested in a joint venture to create a new electronic property settlement business called Symplici, which will leverage ASX’s expertise in providing secure, electronic financial market settlements to support Australia’s successful transition to full electronic conveyancing.

“ASX plays a critical role in Australia’s financial markets as a trusted, central and independent party. We are continuing to work hard to preserve and strengthen this, and investing in the technology that enables innovation and growth. This will position us to take advantage of new opportunities and leverage our expertise to continue to generate benefits for all our stakeholders.”
